Argentinean folk-rock band Sui Generis was formed in the early '70s by singer, guitarist, and keyboardist Charly García and singer/instrumentalist Nito Mestre, who met while being high school students. Their first record, called Vida, was released in 1972, followed by 1973's Confesiones de Invierno

F.E.C. (Frequently Encountered Confusion):

- Brown line is the Volume Envelope.
It's similar to an ADSR envelope, except you draw the whole thing by hand instead of using numeric values.
- Green line is the Pitch bend (frequency shifting).
Center of the drawing area is the frequency you pick. Top and bottom edges are the octave above and octave below that, respectively.
- The string animations are for visualization only.
They serve no function. Except visualization.
- The letters on the piano keys mean you can type to play notes.
You can click the grey boxes below the piano keys to move the keyboard bindings around.

A weathered stone statue of a young boy, possibly a cherub or a child, is the central focus. The boy has curly hair and is looking down at a large, thick book he is holding in his left hand. His right hand is raised, holding a long, cylindrical object, possibly a staff or a scroll. The statue is made of reddish-brown stone and shows signs of age, with some green moss or lichen growing on its surface. In the background, there is a light-colored building with white shutters on the windows and bare tree branches against a pale sky. A dark downspout is visible on the building's facade.
